Tartrazine May Now Be Used to Color Foods

Tartrazine, a coal tar dve, can be used as a coloring in food products in the future. Decision to this effect has been announced by the Bureau of Chem stry. the pure food bureau of the Government following a series of tests showing this color to be harmless and suitable for coloring foods. It is manufactured in large quantities in the United States. Seven other coal tar dyes have been permitted in foods since the enactment of the food and drug act. Samples of all dyes certified by the manufacturers are examined in the Bureau of Chemistry, and only such does permitted as are free from impurities and harmful substances.

A decision has been issued making more stringent requirements in reference to the certification of coal tar dyes when mixed with substances not coal tar dyes. This decision provides that hereafter the manufacturer shall de-posit with the Secretary of Agriculture a declaration that every package in which any such mixture is sold shall have a plain and conspicuous statement of the quantity or proportion of the certified dyes present in the mixture

Social History Made At Pan-American Ball

Social history was made last evening of trumpets announced their arrival, at the ball in honor of the President and Mrs. Wilson for which the diplomatic representatives of the Latin-American republics were hosts, and so pleasant was that history in the making that I. for one, was ever so glad to be present.

On trumpets announced their arrival, the big thrill of the evening. The entrance was most imposing, the President and Mrs. Wilson, preceded by two White House aides, Col. W. W. Harts and Commander Wurtsbaugh, and followed by the men and women of the reception committee, who met their distinguished guests at the door.

Mrs. Wilson wore a handsome black Never before in the annals of this ountry has the President of the United States been the honor guest at a public reception by the representatives of foreign nations, although Mr. Taft in he days when he was President shatered the precedent decreeing that the 'hief Executive of the United States should meet the diplomats only under his own roof, by being an unberaided guest at more than one function at a foreign embassy or legation. The ball was notable, therefore, for the way of the closer social relations that are to cement the friendship be-tween the two Americas.

Real Court Etiquette. Moreover, Washington society had a aste of the court etiquette which is diserved in foreign countries at offi ial functions. "The sheep and the was the reference on every ongue, for a massive twisted rope but off the riect of officialdom from hose less exalted in official rank and those of no rank at all. tans.
Of course the distinction was purely on official lines, but it was most Washington society gathered "out side the line" to view the pomp and circumstance which attended the en-trance of the official world. There i saw Mr and Mrs. Frank Mitchell, the latter just back from a visit to her daughter, the Viscounters de Beu-ghen, in Brussels; Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont, who were a beautiful tiars ert M. She had a small diamond pin in her hair and carried a huge fan of uncurled ostrich feathers in natural colors, which she used with no little grace. After the first touch of formality which followed their gnared mrs. Wilson took their stand in one corner of the ball room, where they greeted with the greatest affability hundreds of the guests. Mrs. Wilson had a smile and a friendly word for everyone and from her pleased expression everyone took occasion to say pretty things about her. The President beamed, and once in a while turned to whisper to his bride. All this came whisper to his bride. All this came after the pretty little ceremony, in which Mrs. Wilson, under Mr. Lansing's escort, was greeted by each of the ladies of the Latin-American contingent of the Diplomatic Corps and the diplomats themselves were presented to the Presedent by the Secretary of State ongress and served as a mile stone on
